Excerpt: .in its general effect an exquisite sense of fitness, a nicety of discrimination as to what is and is not appropriate, and which based almost its entire appeal to the imagination and interest of the public, upon the intrinsic character of the goods displayed. In this case it was a gown--a wedding dress--of exquisite material and design, which in its fine delicacy of detail and arrangement formed a striking contrast to the velvet drapery of the background of the window. In the award of other honors for window decoration, B Altman and Company was given first mention, VWilliam Baumgarten and Company second mention and Dobbs and Company third mention. In one window a silver service, valued at $125,000 which was made for Sir Ranjit Singhji, Maharajah of Barwani, in Central India, occupied the place of honor. A life-size painting of Cardinal Mercier was the...
