Excerpt: . . . NOTES TO ESSAY V. Note K, page 175. THE following account of a person born blind, and couched by Mr. Chessel den, (extracted from the Philosophical Transactions,) affords an interesting illustration of some of my remarks. Observations made by Mr. W. Chessel den, on a young gentleman who was born blind, or lost his sight so early that he had no recollection, of ever having seen, and was couched between thirteen and fourteen years of age. When he first saw, he was so far from making any judgment about distances, that he thought all objects whatever touched his eyes (as he expressed it), as what he felt did his skin; and thought no objects so agreeable as those which were smooth and regular, though he could form no judgment of their shape, or guess what it was in any object that was pleasing to him; he knew not the shape of any thing, nor any one thing from another; but upon being told what things were, whose form he knew before from feeling, he would carefully observe that he might know them again; but having too many objects to learn at once, he forgot many of them, and, as he said, at first, learned to know, and forgot again a thousand things in a day. One particular I will relate: having often forgotten which was the cat and which the dog, he was ashamed to ask; but catching the cat (which he knew by feeling) he was observed...
