Excerpt from An Inquiry Into the Distinctive Characteristics of the Aboriginal Race of America It cannot be questioned that physical diversities do occur, equally singular and inexplicable, as seen in different shades of color, varying from a fair tint to a complexion almost black; and this too under circumstances in which climate can have little or no influence. So also in reference to stature, the differences are remarkable in entire tribes which, moreover, are geographically proximate to each other. These facts, however, are mere exceptions to a general rule, and do not alter the peculiar physiognomy of the Indian, which is as undeviatingly characteristic as that of the Negro; for whether we see him in the athletic Charib or the stunted Chayma, in the dark Californian or the fair Borroa, he is an Indian still. Reviews

Excellent electronic book and valuable one. Better than never, though I am quite late in starting reading this one. I am very easily able to get a delight from studying a written book.
