Appendix I Scope and Methodology random sample, 98. 73 percent. Thus, we based our estimates on a population of about 3, 505 recipients. All of the sampling errors reported below have a confidence level of 95 percent. For estimates of the value of resources transferred when a value was not reported by a recipient, we considered the value of that transfer to be 0. Our estimate of the total value of resources that recipients reported having transferred, 74. 3 million, has a sampling error of plus or minus 12. 9 million. The estimate of the average value of transferred resources, 21, 000, has a sampling error of plus or minus 3, 672. For the estimates of proportions in column 2 of table 1, sampling errors do not exceed plus or minus 3 percentage points. In addition, sampling errors associated with estimates of benefits to be received ( 7. 9 million ) and potential program savings ( 14. 6 million ) do not exceed plus or minus 1 million. Since the principal source of our automated data, the Supplemental ), is subject to periodic quality assurance reviews, SSR SSA Security Record ( we did not independently examine the computer system controls for the SSR. Except for the limitations noted, our review was done between May and December 1995 in accordance with generally accepted government auditing standards.
