Excerpt from A Corean Manual: Or Phrase Book; With Introductory Grammar In issuing a Second Edition of my Manual, I would venture to solicit for my labours the kindly consideration of critics and scholars. The Corean language presents so many difficulties both of grammatical construction and of verb inflection that the task of the student who attempts to acquire a mastery of its colloquial is well nigh hopeless. Although one of the most ancient tongues of Asia, the influence of Chinese literature and civilization early led Corean scholars to relegate the study of their vernacular to a subordinate place in public estimation. The native aspirant for official position and literary honours devotes himself entirely to the study of the Chinese classics; and all official and other correspondence is conducted in Chinese to the exclusion of the Corean script. To the Fathers of the French Mission in Corea belongs the distinction of having compiled the first Dictionary and Grammar of the language - monuments of painstaking accuracy and erudition. As an introduction to the study of the colloquial, I ventured in 1887 to publish a Corean Manual - a collection of sentences prefaced by a few grammatical notes intended to help the novice over the first difficulties of the language and to indicate those essentials of noun inflection and verb conjugation which require especial study and consideration. These sentences met with so favourable a reception that, in deference of the expressed wishes of Corean students and others, I have retained them in much their original form, making only such alterations as a further acquaintance with the spoken language has shown to be necessary and useful.
