I once heard Mr. Brooks preach a great sermon about this: That nobody could stay on the mount, but every one knew it, and went his way with courage by reason of such moments. You cannot think what a sermon it was! I have just been reading the life of the Master of Balliol, and finding great pleasure within. You knew, didn t you? how fond he and Mrs. Dugdale were of each other, and that he was the kindest of friends to her sons. There is little of this in the two big volumes, I suppose because she is not given to letterwriting, which the Master certainly was, --some of his letters belong almost to the level of our E. F. G., --or I must say quite, when I remember some to Dean Stanley and...
