Excerpt from Essays, Biblical and Ecclesiastical: Relating Chiefly to the Authority and the Interpretation of Holy Scripture Although trained in early life in a somewhat advanced Puritan school, the writer was ever led to recognize a distinction between Divine Revelation and the casket which contains it, and therefore never was fettered by that idea of an organic oneness in the whole collection of the Old and New Testaments which, he is thoroughly convinced, lies at the root of many luxurious growths of exegetical error and polemical fanaticism. For instance, the writer in no period of his mental history would have been disturbed had the Apocalypse been placed before St. Matthew, or the Canticles and Esther been relegated to the region of the Apocrypha. These convictions, formed by early training more by an unconscious influence than by any didactic system, were ever afterwards deepened by the study of the originals of Holy Scripture, aided by the critical and hermeneutical apparatus so fully and freely exhibited in the following Essays. His belief in the great doctrines of the Faith has never depended on individual texts of Scripture, and therefore it has not been disturbed by any school of criticism; it has ever been anchored on the firm rock of the Bible, as a whole, and as the depository of God's will to man, and it has, consequently, never been disturbed by the varying and increasing demands of human tradition.
