Mandalas of Life The mandala is a form of art prevalent in Asian religions. The repeating patterns in the circular artwork represent the patterns that are visible everywhere in nature, from flowers and sea creatures to astronomy and the passage of time itself. Carl Jung famously said that the circular drawings he worked on corresponded with his own internal situation. Now, you can make these mandalas fit your own inner sentiments by coloring them yourself. In Buddhism, working on mandalas is sometimes used to induce a trance or altered state of mind. You don't have to go quite that far, though. It's more than enough that you just RELAX. This book features 32 original mandala designs for your coloring pleasure. This item ships from La Vergne, TN. Paperback.
